In describing the"very great good will and humanity" of Albert Einstein in an atricle in The New York Review of March 17, 1966, Robert Oppenheimer said, "if I had to think of a single word for his attitude towards human problems, I would pick the Sanskrit word Ahinsa , not to hurt, Harmlessness."

He said Einstein"had a very deep distrust of power"

How unlike Schlesinger.